Under the Biden administration, the FTC and the Justice Department have increased antitrust enforcement in healthcare with the goal of increasing competition and reducing prices. In addition to filing many more enforcement actions to block mergers or other collusive activities, the agencies have withdrawn long standing healthcare antitrust guidelines, significantly changed the existing merger guidelines and greatly increased the amount of information required from parties intending to merge. These changes have been criticized by many in the healthcare world. This program will review the most significant changes, including the treatment of horizontal and vertical mergers and consolidations, specialty provider roll-ups by private equity firms, providers' use of claimed efficiencies to justify their conduct, efforts to eliminate employment non-compete clauses and the like. The program will also consider the issues presented in the FTC's Texas lawsuit against U.S. Anesthesia Partners and its PE backer, Welsh Carson Anderson & Stowe.
